

Wildlife and Conservation Land in Massachusetts

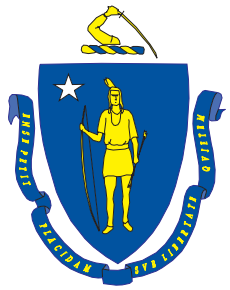

Although Massachusetts is a small state, its unique geography and climate have provided it with a resplendent variety of beautiful vistas and habitat types ranging from rocky shorelines to sandy beaches, pitch pine barrens to towering oak and white pine forests, kettle hole ponds and mountain cascades to immense rivers and reservoirs.

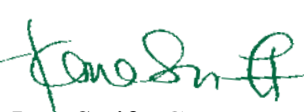

The citizens of Massachusetts began a tradition in the 19th century of recognizing and protecting some of the most wildlife-rich, scenic, recreationally important and historically significant parcels of open space for the public good. As development pressures increased, the need to acquire more public land also intensified. To answer this need, the state legislature approved several bond bills for open space acquisition, and the state's sportsmen filed legislation requiring each of them to purchase a $5.00 Wildlands Conservation stamp annually for the acquisition of wildlife habitat.

As a result, more than 600,000 acres of open space — or roughly 11.5% of the state's total land area — is now protected in Massachusetts through outright purchase or conservation restrictions. This figure includes over 300,000 acres of state forests and parks, and more than 100,000 acres of wildlife management areas. While this is great news, the job is far from complete. To insure that the public will always have the liberty to enjoy the outdoors with its full complement of native plants and animals, a realistic goal of land protection is one million acres, or roughly one-fifth of the state's land mass.

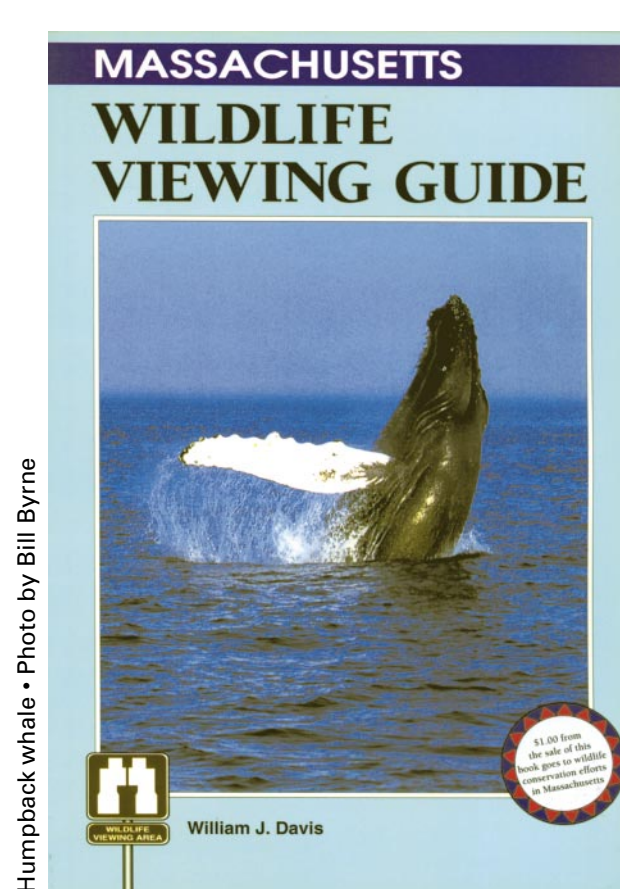

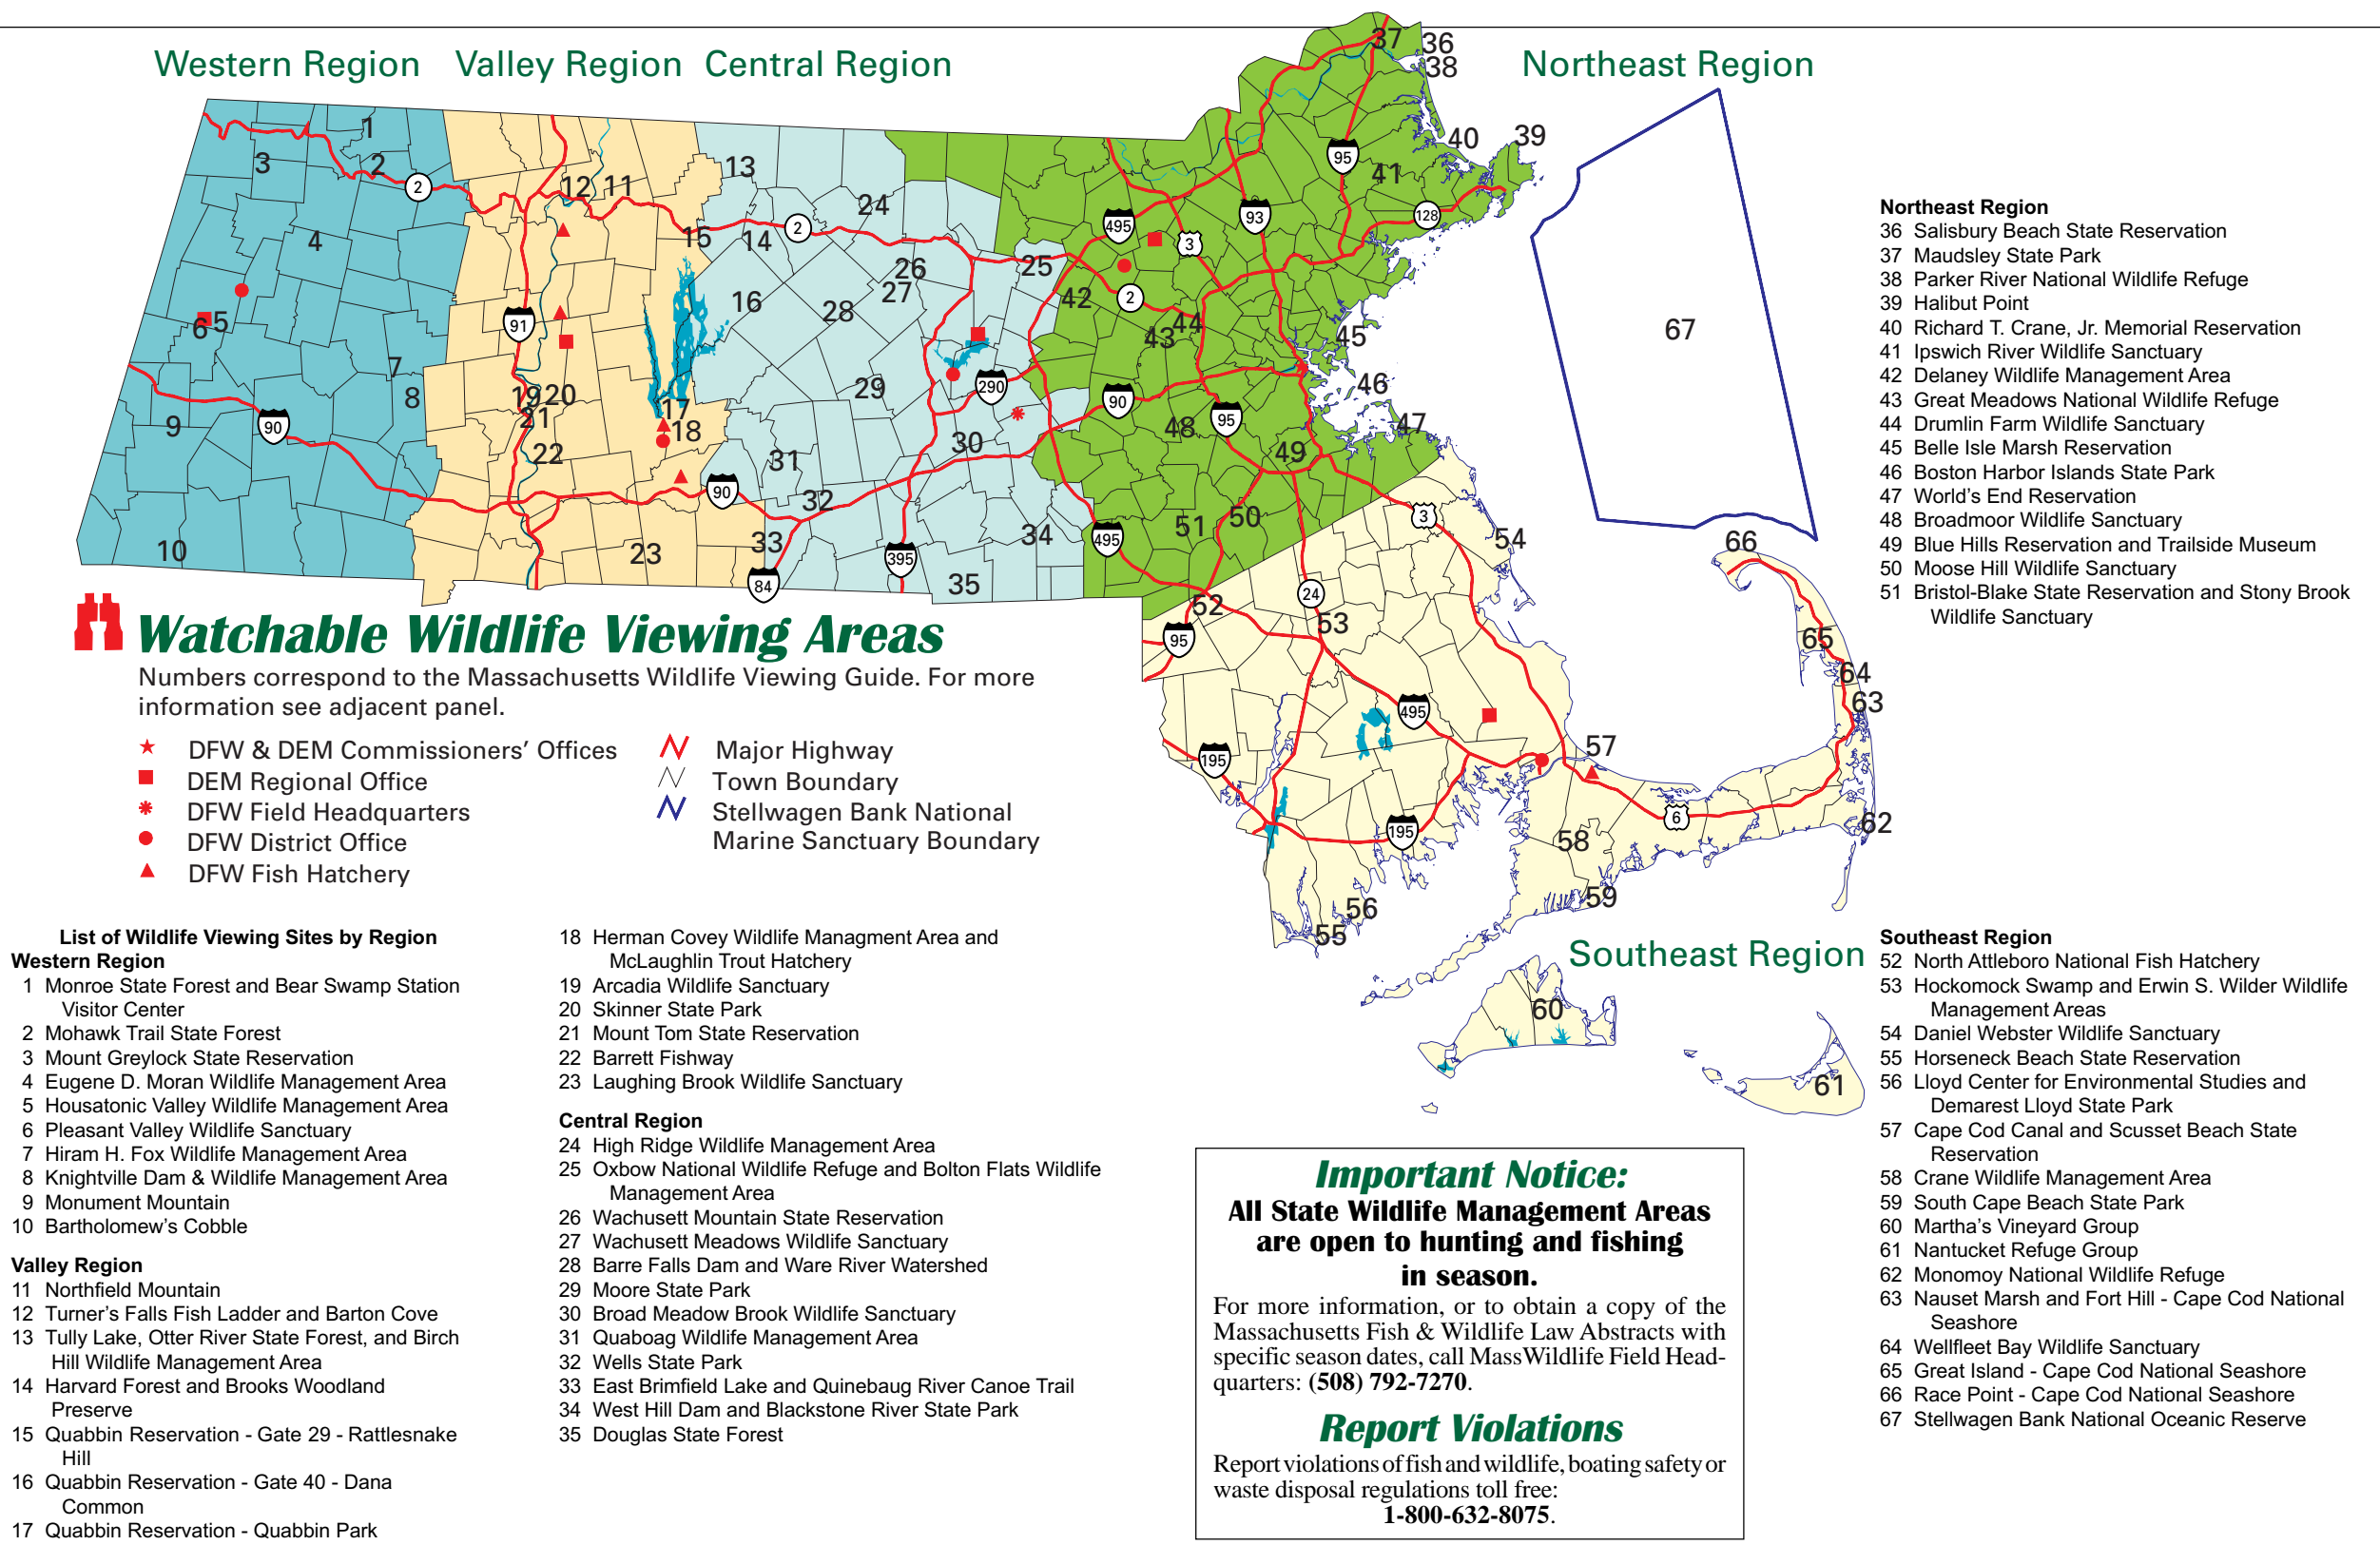

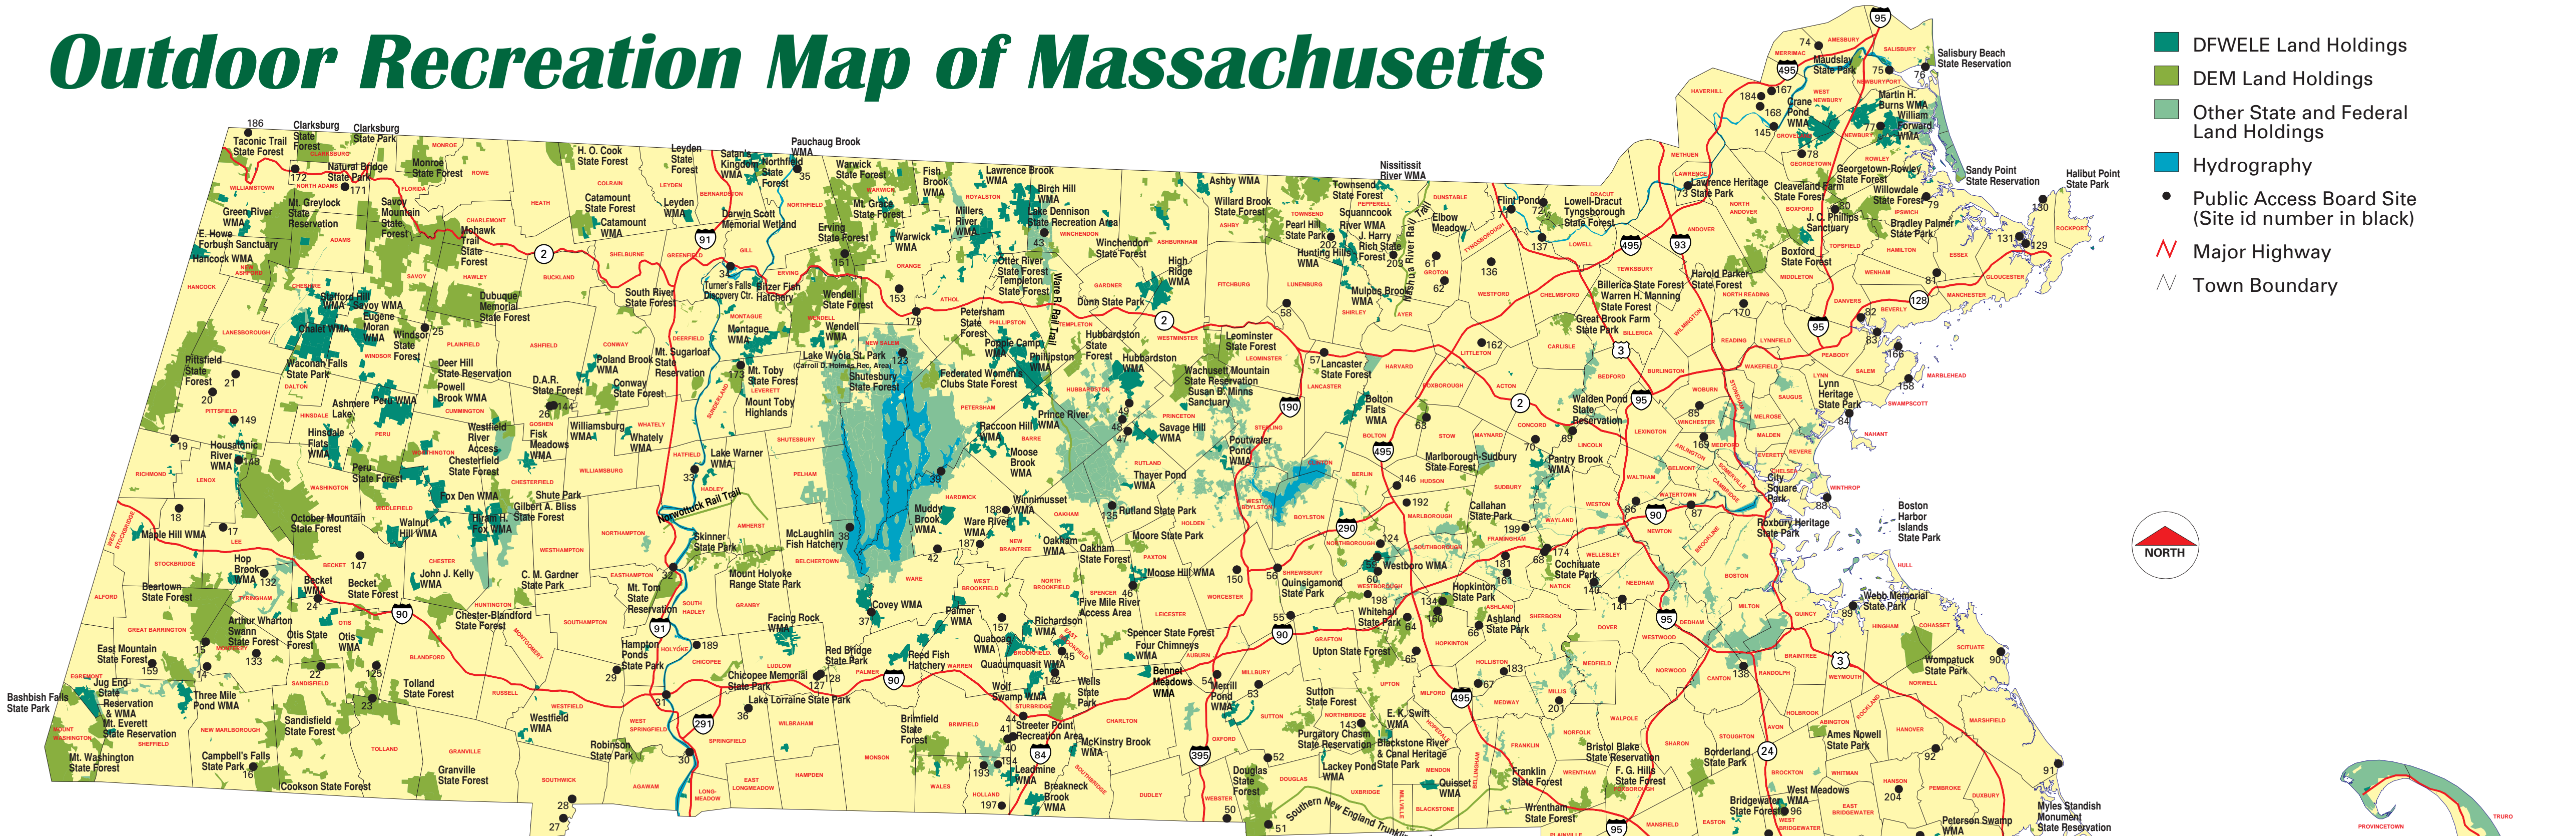

The quality of life in any state depends in large part on the opportunities it provides for outdoor recreation. Thanks to the foresight and commitment of its citizens, Massachusetts offers a great abundance of those opportunities, and will always continue to add to them.

The Massachusetts Wildlife Viewing Guide

The Massachusetts Wildlife Viewing Guide will help you find and explore 67 special areas from the summit of Mt. Greylock in the Berkshires to the depths of Stellwagen Bank. The 96 page full-color guide includes sections on planning a wildlife viewing trip, equipment, viewing tips, safety and ethics. Pick up a copy for $8.95 at any Division of Fisheries & Wildlife District office, the Westboro Field Headquarters [508-792-7270] or our administrative offices in Boston [617-727-3151]. The guide is also available at many area bookstores.

Outdoor Ethics and Safety

Regulations on what is or is not allowed often vary from one state property to another, but a few simple rules of behavior apply to ALL areas and will help insure that everyone has a safe and enjoyable outing:

- From September 15 to May 15 all canoe and kayak occupants must wear a U.S. Coast Guard approved personal flotation device (p.f.d.). Children under 12 and non-swimmers should always wear a pfd when on the water in any craft.
- To fish, hunt or trap, you must purchase and have in your possession a license to do so. Contact any MassWildlife office for information on price, purchase locations and licensing requirements.
- Do not feed wildlife. Animals that accept handouts may become aggressive in demanding food from people. They are more likely than other animals to cause problems around homes and campgrounds, and to be hit by cars.
- Do not handle dead wildlife. Some animal diseases can be transmitted to humans. Leave animal traces such as pellets or scat where you find them.
- Always pack out what you take in, pick up litter, and leave any area you visit in as good or better condition than you found it.
- Leave baby wild animals where you find them. Chances are good the mother is nearby, waiting for you to leave the area so she can return. Much harm is inflicted unintentionally on wildlife by people who think they are "rescuing" young animals.
- Always tell someone where you are going and when you expect to return. Call if your plans change.
- Be prepared for changes in the weather. Carry something warm (coat or blanket), a waterproof covering, and some high energy food. New England weather is notoriously unpredictable.
- Check for ticks! They show up better on light colored clothing than dark. Keep shirts tucked in, and tuck pants into boots or socks. Remember that deer ticks, which can carry diseases transmissible to humans, are very tiny, sometimes smaller than the head of a pin. Thoroughly check yourself, partners and children for ticks promptly after any outdoor outing.
